- Flooding in Pakistan: The Order of Malta's international relief service, Malteser International, is currently on the ground in Pakistan, caring for thousands of people in the Swat Valley. Having been active in the area since the earthquake in 2005, Malteser International is well placed to distribute staple food to families in the severely affected districts of Swat and Kohistan to assure their survival for the coming months. Families are also being provided with family kits containing cooking equipment and tarpaulins to protect themselves against the enduring rain, and hygiene kits. Trócaire has also been working in Pakistan for many years and established an office there in 2006. They are collaborating with Caritas Internationalis on the global Church response to the situation. The local Caritas is active but not strong given the difficult situation of the Christian Churches in Pakistan. They are providing assistance to minority communities and are cooperating with all Irish Missionary organisations to provide assistance to their communities and parishes. Your donation this weekend will be used by these organisations to provide emergency relief and to assist poor communities to rebuild their lives after the floods.
